Key stats

The $22 NL Hold'em Main Event was just one of 100 micro-stakes tournaments held over the past 11 days, which has seen scores of recreational poker players turn a few dollars into thousands. The record-breaking 1,308,994 entries led to $8,276,083.13 in prizes being awarded throughout the series, going way beyond the initial $5 million guarantee but falling just short of the $8,289,638.19 won by players in the original MicroMillions series. MicroMillions II, that took place in July, awarded a total of $8,193,862.75.

Leaderboard winner

There was a sense of déjà vu when looking at the final MicroMillions III series leaderboard, as Team PokerStars Pro Marcin 'Goral' Horecki topped it again having already taken the crown in the inaugural MicroMillions back in March. This time he scored 505 points – almost 100 points more than second place – following cashes in 34 events, one of which was a title win in event 62. The Polish pro gets his hands on the MM III trophy and a $16,000 PCA package for his monumental efforts.
